

LIFE IN THE METROPOLIS.

DASHES HERE AND THERE BY THE SUN'S REPORTERS.

George Innis, a wholesale druggist of William street, was summoned to the Yorkville Police Court yesterday to answer a complaint of grand larceny preferred against him by William S. Williams of 105 East Eighth street. Williams, who in his affidavit states that he has been a resident of New York for 15 years, advised that on Feb. 16, 1984, he intrusted to Innis's care three first mortgage bonds of the Louisville and Nashville Railroad, New Orleans and Mobile division, of the value of $1,000 each, and that Innis had failed to return them to him when demanded. He learned on Nov. 15, 1984, that Innis had disposed of them. Owing to Justice White's absence there was no hearing in the case yesterday. The court adjourned until 10 o'clock tomorrow.

Mr. Innis, who is a benevolent-looking, white-haired man, 50 years of age, with a white beard and mustache, was cleared up in future proceedings. He is ex Mayor of Poughkeepsie, where he resided, and is a trustee of Yonkers

Laying a Corner Stone while the Rain Fell.
The corner stone of the new Roman Catholic Church of St. Anthony of Padua was laid yesterday by Archbishop Corrigan. The church will be built beside the old edifice in Sullivan street, near Houston street, and after a time a monastery will be attached to it. Early yesterday morning low mass was celebrated in the old church, and shortly before 11 o'clock 500 boys and girls, the latter greatly concerned at the way the pitiless rain

And offensive mud were playing havoc with their vision for a moment, he consumed the wafer and drank the consecrated wine. The priest then marched to the platform, headed by Archbishop Corrigan, and took their places, while the choir sang mass music.

At the close of the singing Archbishop Corrigan descended from the front of the altar and moved, with the attendant clergy following him, to the place where the altar was to be laid. His part in this part of the ceremony was not laborious. He tapped the stone with a silver trowel, dexterously deposited upon it a dash of mortar, which was as dexterously scraped off again a little later by a workman, and it was done. The choir sang again, the Archbishop pronounced the benediction, and the ceremony was over. There had, of course,

Capt. Husey Engaged for the Season.

Capt. Jack Husey, the life saver, sat outside the wooden box provided for the gate keepers at Castle Garden yesterday. He was sympathizing with the tired horses dragging along the big express wagons. Two well-dressed men approached. They asked where they

The well-dressed men looked at them admiringly. Then they said they were agents for a museum at Coney Island. They wanted to engage the Captain for the season. He would be required three times every week to appear as a supper-dancing person, and on Sunday he would have to saddle a horse.

“I am of French descent,” said Capt. Jack proudly. “My family are the Husseys of Normandy, France, who in the year 1340 invaded Ireland. There were eleven brothers in one family, and when Saint O’Rourke was mortally wounded at the battle of O’Rough Jack Hussey, an aide-de-camp, tore his coat from his back, threw it over the dying saint, who blessed the Husseys.” The museum guests at once engaged the Captain for the season.

Uncle Rufus will swear to-day.

Uncle Rufus Hatch once had a carriage

Uncle Rufus' friend Mr. Hester has been repairing, made by Brewster & Co., which has become famous by reason of repairs made upon it. Brewster & Co. sued Mr. Hester for $435, balance of purchase money and for repairs made on the carriage. The case was called for the fourth trial yesterday in Part III, City Court.

Uncle Rufus was present in court, and when the young man who is his attorney moved for a further adjournment and the other side opposed the motion, Uncle Rufus muttered something about leaving a sick bed, stamped his foot viciously, and said impetuously "I've enough to make a man swear." "You're right, brother, though," the Court was evidently disposed to order the case to go on. The fourth juror intimated that a member of his family was to be married to-day and he couldn't attend in court. The foreman proposed that the case be adjourned to attend a funeral this morning. In spite of all this, the case was finally adjourned until this morning and the foreman was, by consent, excused to attend the funeral. The case may be finished in time for the fourth juror to attend the wedding in his family.

Who Caused McGurk's Death?

Edward McGurk was a waiter at the Fifth Avenue Hotel up to last Saturday. On that evening he was arrested and locked in the Thirtieth street station. On Sunday morning he was taken to the New York Hospital, where he died an hour later. An autopsy showed that death had been caused by peritonitis, following a rupture of the bladder. McGurk said just before he died that he had been beaten in the abdomen by some McGurk is said to have been in good circumstances. His wife came here from Philadelphia yesterday.

The Jefferson Market Police Court, called upon District Attorney Martine yesterday to exert her fascinations on him and induce him to permit her to withdraw her charge of theft against Della Bruelle of 9 East Twenty-seventh street, her landlady. Miss Amee was a close-fitting gray walking suit with a mannish topcoat to match, and a dark blue hat. The interpreter's office proved to be a nuisance, as soon as she entered Mr. Martine's presence she rattled off her pretty broken English at an amazing rate.

It wouldn't work, though. Mr. Martine explained to Look Out for Bad $5s and $2s.

New Counterfeit $5 and $2 Treasury notes appeared in St. Louis in March. They are poorly printed from wood blocks, and are circulated almost exclusively by Italians. The "y" in Treasurer Wyman's name is a

The Policeman Followed Down the Steps.
Charles Armstrong of 125 East 110th street secured a warrant on Sunday for the arrest of Jeremiah

Curtin of 313 Water street for furlrowing his head with a bullet. Court Officer Dwyer found both at work in a new building in East 119th street yesterday. Curtin was in the third story, and when he saw Dwyer he caught a rope that was dangling from the roof, and slid to the ground. Dwyer followed and caught him.

In the Harpim Court Arresting was too drunk to make a complaint. Justice Gorman sent him to the House of Detention and held Curtin for trial.

Promptly Acquitted of Murder.

Thomas Thompson was on trial yesterday in the Oyer and Terminer for the murder of Morris Slattery in a barroom at Catherine slip on the night of the 11th of last April. It was shown that Thompson, who was the bartender, was attacked by Slattery, who came from the lunch counter, and that in self-defence he took up a Japanese sword, which he thrust at his assailant. The jury gave a verdict of not guilty without leaving their seats.

Commissioner Squire removed Water Meter Inspector Brady yesterday because, in the opinion of the Commissioner, his services can be dispensed with. He also removed James McClellan, sewer inspector, for inattention to duty. Both men are members of the County Democracy.

The Fire Men in the Hay.
Assistant Fire Marshal Frank, who is in-

Investigating the car stable fire on Saturday night, has ascertained that the fire originated in a hay loft on the top floor on the forty-third street side of the building. He has found no evidence that the stables were set on fire.

Signal Office Prediction.

Generally fair weather, nearly stationary temperature, variable winds becoming northwesterly.
